Ginger Carney Biography

Ginger Carney is well-versed in practical application of the ITAR and assists clients in all aspects of establishing and managing an export compliance program. She has managed export compliance programs at Varian Associates, Watkins-Johnson Company, McDonnell Douglas (acquired by Boeing in 1997), Smiths Aerospace, Northrop Grumman, and BAE Systems. These positions included experience at UK-owned companies, and responsibility for export compliance audit and training programs at the corporate level. Prior to opening her own business, Ginger was the Director Export Compliance at the Network Centric Operations Industry Consortium (NCOIC®).

Ginger began her export compliance career at the Defense Technology Security Administration (DTSA) when it was created in 1983. In 1987, she left government service and continued her export licensing and compliance career in the private sector.

Ginger actively participates on committees and trade group associations. She has been an active member of the Defense Trade Advisory Group since 2005. She served on the Board of Directors of the Society for International Affairs (SIA) for eight years, culminating her service as President. She continues to be an active SIA volunteer, and has participated on the International Council for the Aircraft Industries Association.

Ginger lives and works from her home office in Bend, Oregon.
