Patricia C. Dudley Biography

Patricia Dudley has an extensive background in international trade controls and direct experience working with the U.S. foreign policy and national security establishment. With more than 14 years experience with the U.S. Department of State, serving three Secretary of State's, and more than five years of hands-on experience in the satellite services and defense industry, Ms. Dudley possesses a unique combination of Government experience with practical application and implementation. She is also an experienced auditor, public speaker and trainer.

Ms. Dudley's last assignment with the U.S. Department of State was as a licensing officer for the Office of Defense Trade Controls (now known as the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls or DDTC). There, Ms. Dudley averaged more than 350 cases a month, specializing in USML categories VIII, XI, XII and, at that time, was DTC's primary licensing officer for night vision. Ms. Dudley also provided training and guidance for new licensing officers and industry, and drafted decision memos and papers for the Assistant Secretary.

Soon after her departure from the State Department, Ms. Dudley went to work for Intelsat, the world's second largest satellite owner/operator. As Senior Manager, Export Compliance and Administration for Intelsat, Ms. Dudley was instrumental in transforming an intergovernmental organization to a private corporation with a state-of-the-art international trade compliance program. Her duties included effecting policies and procedures for export compliance, due diligence process for international agents, comprehensive Denied Party Screening System, training for more than 900 employees, and Intelsat's primary liaison to the U.S. Government's executive agencies.

Ms. Dudley is an experienced public speaker, presenting for groups ranging from 50 to 500 attendees, and is a member of several professional trade associations, including the Society for International Affairs and the National Council for International Trade and Development. Ms. Dudley lives in Fairfax, Virginia with her husband, Rich, and their three boys
